INTRODUCTION

Post-COVID-19, the international community is even more focused on ensuring that the world builds back greener and more resilient economies that contribute towards the Sustainable Development Goals. There is a concerted drive to enhance the global partnership for sustainable development, with multi-stakeholder engagement mobilizing knowledge, expertise, technology, and financial resources in all countries, especially in developing countries. These multi-stakeholder partnerships aim to promote effective public, public-private, and civil society partnerships, building on these organizations' experience and resourcing strategies. Over the past decade, international organizations and the global community understands that the achievement of SDGs must be in collaboration with the private sector.

Islamic Chambers of Commerce, Industry, and Agriculture (ICCIA), as the largest representative of the private sector of the 57 OIC countries, developed this report as part of its internal International Organizations Strategy to support its projects and activities and as part of its alignment with Goal 17 for Global Partnerships. The technical profiles document has served as a useful database in designing organization-specific understanding and discussion for long-term strategic relationship development. Thus, ICCIA is pleased to share this report with its esteemed members and their members and to support their work in acquiring technical assistance to further their SDG-based projects and programs. The report contains profiles of UN agencies and other international organizations highlighting their focus areas and their geographic priorities.

Understanding international and regional organizations, their objectives, and focus areas is the first step toward creating space for developing a strong, mutually beneficial relationship. It opens opportunities for all stakeholders to engage according to their areas of expertise to support the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals as well as, from OIC's perspective, the OIC Program of Action 2025. Joining up with the specialists provides access to grants, technical support, and knowledge sharing that can have an incremental impact on the growth of the private sector in our member countries. This is also one of the Sustainable Development Goals, SDG 17: Partnerships for the Goals.
